

Dr. Szilvia Péter-Szarka
psychologist, talent expert

Completed MA studies in psychology and English and PhD studies (thesis supervisor: Dr László Balogh) at Debrecen University. She is currently a lecturer in psychology at the Department of Educational Psychology of the Institute of Psychology, where she holds courses on development psychology, educational psychology and talent support for students of psychology and for teacher trainees. Main fields of interest: development of psychological aspects of talent; methods for creating a school climate that stimulates creativity and possibilities of diminishing school violence by improving the school atmosphere. Besides teaching and research, she is active in counselling and measurement activities at several schools, and she is a regular lecturer at in-service teacher training and other courses.